Q: How to change JavaScript value in combination with Date value I want to change the JavaScript value in combination with Date. And I don't know how to change the JavaScript in combination with Date. I'm trying to put together a quiz. After the user has successfully answered some questions they will be presented with a like button. If they press the like button I have a Javascript function that will change the value of that button to a 'liked' button. But I also need that if they don't like the posts I have some code that will remove the like button. I can only think of using ajax in the PHP code, but I can't think of any other way. Can someone please help me and help me change this Javascript code? Here is the Javascript I use to change the button: //Function that changes button to a liked button function like_post(post_id) { $.post('', {id: post_id, '_token': token}, function(data) { $('#answer_' + post_id).html(data); }, "json"); } A: You don't need jQuery, just plain Javascript: function like_post(post_id) { if (data === 'liked') { // do nothing } else { document.getElementById('answer_' + post_id).innerHTML = 'liked'; } } Q: Is there a security risk in storing user-submitted data on the server? I'm trying to find a simple answer to this question, and while I'm sure there is none, I'm not sure the right phrases to search for the answer. I'm building a web application that allows users to upload images through a jquery plugin. The plugin communicates with a php script that saves the images to the server (in a folder called "images", which is physically in my code). Is there any security risk with saving images on the server? The images are text files and I wouldn't be surprised if there could be a way to access them, but in that case I would want
